Electronic textiles, also known as smart garments, smart clothing, smart textiles, or smart fabrics, are fabrics that enable digital components such as a battery and a light (including small computers), and electronics to be embedded in them. Smart textiles are fabrics that have been developed with new technologies that provide added value to the wearer.

Structural health monitoring (SHM) refers to the process of implementing a damage detection and characterization strategy for engineering structures. Here damage is defined as changes to the material and/or geometric properties of a structural system, including changes to the boundary conditions and system connectivity, which adversely affect the system's performance.

1. Introduction. The paradigm shifts from the realm of traditional desktop computing to an increasingly sophisticated computing (Gubbi, Buyya, Marusic, & Palaniswami, 2013) as well as the significant increase in connected devices and sensors have made feasible the vision for living in a smart environment. Several applications of a smart environment have been introduced recently, including smart ...
